Press Release — Autumn/Winter 2025

As Northern celebrates its 20th anniversary in 2025, our team of creatives and designers has been busy preparing 20 new items be released throughout the year.

The Dahl Chandelier Returns: An Original Design from Norway's Parliament

In 1956, Birger Dahl designed a series of lamps for the renovation of Norway's Parliament building in Oslo. When the building reopened in 1958, the interiors were illuminated by pendants, wall lamps and chandeliers, carrying Dahl's distinctive modernist signature.

In 2016, Northern reintroduced the Dahl pendant to mark the centenary of Birger Dahl's birth. Now, the series is completed with the chandelier and wall lamp – both part of the original commission, rediscovered in the Parliament building's archives and faithfully brought back into production.

The Dahl Chandelier preserves the timeless geometry of Dahl's original, with multiple mouth-blown glass globes anchored by brass detailing. Updated with discreet technical adjustments, the chandelier has been made more versatile for modern living – with proportions adapted for standard ceiling heights and improved safety and maintenance.

Available with small or large glass shades, and in brass finish or black with brass details, the chandelier brings one of Birger Dahl's most striking designs back into circulation, bridging Norwegian design heritage with contemporary interiors.

Award-winning designer Birger Dahl (1916–1998) was a pioneer of modern Scandinavian lighting. As head of design at Norwegian electronics firm Sønnico in the mid-20th century, he created a series of works that would define the era, including the Dokka pendant – the first Norwegian lamp to receive a Gold Medal at the Triennale di Milano.

In 1956, Dahl designed a complete lighting scheme for the renovation of Norway's Parliament building. The Dahl series of pendants, chandeliers, and wall lamps was part of this commission, exemplifying his geometric clarity and refined minimalism. Characterised by strict forms softened with gentle contours, his designs continue to feel remarkably contemporary.

Today, Northern's reintroductions of Dahl's classics – including the pendant, wall lamp, and chandelier – ensure that his legacy endures in homes and public spaces worldwide.
